THE DRY GOODS MARKET.

The approach of spring, the price of gold, the surrender of Paris and the heavy snow storms, each in its own way, affects the dry goods market to a greater or less degree, temporarily or prospectively. The snow which will replenish the exhausted streams greater or less degree, temporarily or prospectively. The snow which will replenish the exhausted streams of New England, and so act beneficently, has been felt to be anything but a blessing while it blocked the wheels of commerce or the car wheels, which are the same thing, and made transportation difficult. The approaching termination of the war and the price of gold have an effect to make the market slightly unsteady, and buyers are not in a hurry to fill up their stocks, while prices may at any time be materially advanced or lowered.

Unbleached sheetings and shirtings remain about the same. There is not a heavy stock in the hands of agents, and the standards are queted without essential change.

Bleached sheetings and shirtings are ordinarily notive. Some of the best makes are becoming scarce. Prices will probably remain firm, as the spring trade will not find the market overstocked.

Prints are in good demand, and there is no change in price of any importance. New spring styles are being opened for the Southern market. Western buyers are in no hurry to make large purchases.

In foreign waite goods and timens the trade is active, sales being much greater than at the corresponding season last year. Prices for all house-keeping goods are firm, with an upward tendency. The trade in the thinner varieties of foreign white goods is hardly opened, but there is not likely to be any falling of in price, foreign yarns having advanced materially.

Foreign woolless are active, heavy sales having

THE CAMBER RIOTS

A Verdict at Last-The Jury Out Twenty-one Hours-Scuders Found Guilty-Only the Beginning.

In this remarkable case, which came to a conclusion yesterday morning at eight o'clock, and which has occupied nearly three weeks, eighty witnesses have been examined, fifty for the government and thirty for the defence. The case was given to the jury at cleven o'clock on Friday was given to the jury at cleven o'clock on Friday morning, and they remained out until eight o'clock pesieriday morning, when they found Francis Souders guilty on the first and third counts of the indictment, and not guilty on the second count. The two counts on which the prisoner was found guilty relate to the morning seenes; the second count to the obstruction of voters in the afternoon. Counsel for the defence say that the acquittal on the second count throws the whole proceedings on the construction of the act. There are still two indictments against Souders—one for obstructing voters and the other for interfering with officers of election. Next Threaday it is to be decided in what order the other defendants are to be taken, but it is expected that the trial of Squire Henry will come next.
